

Lauren Aldridge, M.S., CCC-SLP is our speech-language pathologist. She obtained her Bachelors degree from Delta State University with a major in speech and hearing sciences and a minor in special education. She obtained her Master's degree in communication disorders from Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale, FL. She went on to finish her CFY at North Sunflower Medical Center and obtained her Certificate of Clinical Competence (CCC) from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Lauren enjoys spending time with her two daughters, Ali Rose and Aspen Kay, visiting her family in Yazoo City, and playing tennis.

Lauren is passionate about her field and is able to treat a variety of disorders of individuals from birth until end of life. These disorders include but are not limited to: speech, language, cognition, and dysphagia. Lauren recently finished a training in neuromuscular electrical stimulation, which is a great treatment tool for those with facial drooping and swallowing disorders.

Lauren is eager to learn, passionate about her job, and cares for each patient. Treatments are individualized to meet each person's specific needs and work on their individual goals to better their quality of life.
